communication with the memory and a network interface, the network server including a processor, the method comprising:

providing, by the processor, an electrical signal embodying a menu of funeral process items to a client device through the interface, each menu item corresponding to a set of data stored in memory (Figs. 1-10); determining, by the processor, the appropriate set of data to retrieve in response to selection of one of the menu items (Figs. 1-10); and providing an electrical signal embodying the appropriate set of data to the client device through the interface (Figs. 1-10); wherein the selection corresponds to product supplier information (Fig. 1-10); wherein the product supplier information includes a list of products offered by product suppliers and associated prices (page 2 [0035, -0038]); displaying, in a sequence a funeral plan option from a set of funeral plan options on a display of a client device for executing the computer process(Fig. 7, page 6 (step-by-step approach)); receiving a funeral plan option selection through an input device of the client device (Fig. 7, page 6 (step-by-step-approach)); proceeding to a next funeral plan option to receive another funeral plan option selection, and transmitting from the client device a computer data signal embodying the funeral product option selections made during each of the funeral planner steps (Fig. 7, page 6 (step-by-step approach))
